Film Description

After losing her job as a hotel worker in Las Vegas, Ruby Duncan joined a welfare rights group of mothers who defied notions of the “welfare queen.” In a fight for guaranteed income, Ruby and other equality activists took on the Nevada mob in organizing a massive protest that shut down Caesars Palace.

Community Discussion and DJ Party Feat. Movement Songs

The film screening is followed by a catered reception and community discussion about guaranteed income led by Sandra Uribe and Renee Alger of First 5 Sonoma County and the Pathway to Income Equity program. In tribute to the long history of movement music and civil rights, DJ Damien offers up a curated collection of songs from around the world and across generations about the long fight for economic justice and the struggle for R-E-S-P-E-C-T.
